Althusser and friends are finally back in full English translation and ready to save Marxist theory from the scourges of humanism and bourgeois ideology. Reading Capital combines Kantian epistemology with French structuralism to provide a new view on Marxism and historical materialism. The foundation of this Kantian project is the reassertion of the distinction between phenomena and noumena as a materialist distinction between “knowledge” and the “real”.

Reading Reading Capital: surely, the linguistic reprise does not escape you. Our project, very much like the project of Louis Althusser and his students, is to return to a formative critical text in order to deploy it in our contemporary political struggles. That, I would argue, was Althusser’s project—as it is ours.
