depends on who sponsors the plan and who bears the risk for paying for the insured services. Generally, the federal government regulates managed care and other health plans sponsored by private-sector employers. On the other hand, the states regulate the business of insurance, which includes the MCO (such as a ...

Managed Health Care: Federal and State Regulation

The many simultaneous changes that have taken place in the health care market over the last several years — increasing managed care penetration, expanding health plan networks, and plan mergers — make it difficult to measure the impact of an individual factor, such as a specific new managed care regulation.
